GANANOQUE - story by Doug Price

A quick run found most of the Toronto contingent in Gananoque by 10:30 a.m. to join the American Megmen. Gananoque was at its best - the fine weather complimenting an already attractive old town. John Brown's 1956 "S S" was the showstopper, replete with its numbers from racing days of yore. Frank Foulkes and I were generously conceding to one another the honour of having the tattiest Meg.

The afternoon featured a boat tour through the Thousand Islands, the highlight being an unhurried cruise through the middle of a practice speed boat course. Craft screaming past starboard and port made us feel a part of the race until a spectacular spill contented us with our stately barge. A short stop at tiny Hart Island for Beult Castle necessitated a comic opera clearance through U.S. immigration. Great Britisher Alasdair Wallace discovered that the simplest way through was to declare himself a "Landed Immigrant". The same trick on returning to Gananoque nearly found him classified as an un-person by Canadian officials.

Following some rather energetic photography by Mr. Wallace (featuring 100 yard dashes so that he could include himself in the picture) the group repaired to the renowned "Golden Apple Inn" for an excellent dinner. Thus fortified, the day trippers set off after dark for Toronto. Most fun in this convoy was had by the generator in Alasdair's car which burned out 150 miles east of Toronto. After repair, a drowsy crew slipped home to Toronto at 5 a.m.. Such are the unique joys of Morganing.
